The installation of General Oscar Mejia Victores as head of state restored the hierarchical command in the armed forces that was disrupted in the administration of the man he deposed, Brigadier General Efrain Rios Montt, and has been interpreted as a victory for senior commanders in the military.

But, it is noted, the victory may be only temporary because disaffection reportedly continues to run high among junior officers. Western diplomats said that junior offilikely to be between 5 percent and cers had been planning a coup in early August and that General Mejia Victores and his supporters had made their move, in part, to head it ployment this year was likely to off to avoid the more sweeping average less than the 2.35 million changes that might have followed

General Mejia Victores has lifted the state of alarm, a modified form of martial law, that was imposed by General Rios Montt at the end of June, and Guatemalans say life has returned to normal. Secret tribunals set up by General Rios Montt last year to handle serious criminal cases were dissolved.

"We would have had no objections if they came but this was an act of military hooliganism." said Ron Sinoway, an attorney with the Civil Liberties Monitoring Project, an advocacy group that is a plaintiff in the suit along with the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws and the Denny residents.

Officials of the Campaign Against Marijuana Planting say the residents of Denny overreacted because the task force was so successful. And, they add, although the task force did not use firearms in Denny, someooe in the forest fired at least seven shots as the trucks drove through the area.

The campaign conducted 122 raids in its first two weeks. Thirty-four arrests were made, and the task force uprooted and destroyed 15,000 plants. which officials estimate had a potential street value of $100 million.

California is second only to Hawaii in marijuana cultivation, and because growers have not been actively policed recently, the business has grown to well over $1 billion a year.

Officials, while agreeing that not all the people in Denny are marijuana growers, say that they must go into the area well-armed and cautious because their opposition is armed and vicious.

They say that they have found sophisticated laser alarms, and grenades and dynamite attached to trip wires. Other devices are more primitive: bear trans, fish hooks on clear wire suspended at eye level from trees, and boles in the ground filled with sharp sticks.

The growers are protecting their crops against thieves, but law officers say that hikers and hunters who have innocently stumbled into marijuana gardens have been accosted by armed guards and their cars have been set aftre and riddled with

Since the raids began Aug. 15, officials say, they have seized dozens of firearms, 40 sticks of dynamite, six attack dogs and some stolen property.

Settlers first came to Denny in the 1880s to work in the gold mines. The latest occupants are mostly retirees, people with summer homes and people who rejected city life in the 1960s and 70s. There is no television or radio, and propane and firewood are used for heating and conking.

"We resent being treated like criminals and having guns poked in our faces," said Denny's postmaster, Katherine Bauer, who lives with her 5year-old son in one of the newer houses in the area.

When the task force entered town last week, she said, "It was like an armed state."

Soviet Ears Are Tuned For Kremlin's Jet Story

Where Suspicion of Foreigners Is Way Of Life, Intruder Theory Is Plausible

By Serge Schmemann New York Times Service

MOSCOW - In a country where secrecy, insecurity and suspicioo of the outside world permeate all aspects of life, the explanations offered by the Kremlin about the South Korean airliner that was shot down Sept. 1 seem certain of widespread acceptance.

Although Russians reacted with incredulity and dismay on hearing that a civilian plane had been downed, the measured doses of official explanation - branding the plane a hostile intruder, attributing its fate to U.S. anti-Soviet aggression and mentioning challenges to Soviet sovereignty and prestige have played to some of the strongest instincts ourtured by the Sovi-

In a land where foreigners are viewed with deep distrust, where state frontiers are regarded as the front lines in an ideological struggle, the ootion that any plane straying into Soviet airspace is probably hostile would be common.

The Soviet explanations steered the public away from the U.S. report that a Soviet pilot had shot down a civilian jumbo jet carrying 269 people - facts that have vet to be explicitly acknowledged by Moscow — and to the familiar patterns of Soviet-American rivalry.

The Soviet Union has volunteered only that its interceptors "stopped" an intruder after it had been followed and signaled, and that the pilot could have mistaken it for a U.S. RC-135 surveillance

Virtually all the other information on which Moscow has built its case - the plane's course, the sensitivity of the zones it crossed, questions about why it strayed off course, its communications with the ground and the earlier passage of a spy plane - has been attributed to the West.

The device is common in the Soviet press and serves several purposes. One is to reduce the damage of foreign reports by releasing them gradually and with elaborate explanations that fit them into the developing official version.

Another is to reveal, at home and to the West, as few chies as possible about what Moscow knows. In commentaries on disarma-

It is an obsession that Western experts on Soviet affairs say cannot be explained solely by the Kremlin's fixation on security nor by the Soviet Union's authoritarian tradi-

An equally compelling motive is the Communist state's intolerance of anything that challenges the official myth of an infallible, humanitarian and peace-loving ideology.

The usual charge against politi-cal dissidents is spreading "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda," frequently abroad, as if disclosure of imperfections were treachery.

Other examples of the reluctance to display failures abound. For the last two years the Soviet statistical office has simply stopped publish-ing harvest figures rather than ad-mit that grain crops have been

Domestic disasters are almost never reported unless the death toll is so high that some limited accounting is unavoidable.

There is also an almost paranoic distrust of foreigners. Foreign radio broadcasts are jammed, and session of Western publications unsanctioned contacts with foreigners are regarded as evidence of disloyalty.

Newspaper exposes of dissidents routinely note that the people in-volved had met with foreigners and had foreigners' names in their address books.

The notion that visiting foreigners are suspect or that Russians going abroad must be carefully screened is so ingrained that many Soviet people would be instinctively suspicious of the very fact that a plane strayed across their border,

The attitude extends to situations Westerners find bizarre. One U.S. scholar who recently visited several institutes in Moscow found two of them developing identical sociological data, and he asked a researcher why he simply did not borrow the studies from the other such a measure would in some cases harm Western airlines, which find the Moscow route profitable because business travelers to the Soviet Union almost invariably choose their own airline rather than Aeroflot, the Soviet carrier.

In Copenhagen, Scandinavian Air System pilots declared Wednesday a 60-day boycom of all flights to the Soviet Union starting Monday, an SAS spokesman said. In London, the British Air Line Pilots Association announced it was instructing its members not to joined the call for an international 60-day ban on flights to Moscow. But a spokesman for Lufthansa, which flies 10 times a week to Moscow and Leningrad, said any cancellation of the service would violate a 1971 civil aviation agreement between Bonn and Moscow. The company itself could oot take such a step without first consulting the federal government, he said.

NEW DELHI -After a week of waiting and criticism from opposition leaders, the government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi issued its first substantive reaction Wednesday to the downing of a South Korean airliner by a Soviet jet fighter, but it neither mentioned the Soviet Union by name nor criticized it explicitly for shooting down the plane.

The government statement issued Wednesday night expressed "shock" over the incident and said it "deeply deplored" the loss of Western diplomats in New Delhi indicated the low-key reaction may have been linked to a visit this week to the Soviet Union, India's major arms supplier, by the foreign minister, P.V. Narasimha Rao. He was meeting in Moscow with the Soviet foreign minister, Andrei A. Gromyko, to discuss issues expected at a United Nations General Assembly session that Mrs. Gandhi will address on Sept. 28.

Unlike the leaders of a number of conaligned nations, Mrs. Ganthi herself made no comment.

The opposition Janata Party called Wednesday on Mrs. Gandhi to "clearly and categorically" decounce an "act of barbarism" by the Soviet Union.

BLACKPOOL, England (Reuters)—Britain's Trades Union Congress ordered an investigation Wednesday into the causes of the crushing electoral defeat in June of the Labor Party.

The Trades Union Council told its new general council - elected Thesday in a swing to the right - to prepare a major report on how the movement had lost the support of its own members. Speaker after speaker reminded the annual union conference that fewer than half of the union members in Britain voted for the Labor Party. A key phrase in the motion called for "an objective appraisal of the policies themselves," wording that will give rightists on the general council a mandate to steer the congress way from the leftist stances that

Man Strips, Tosses Leaflets in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) - A man appeared on the roof of a 10-story building opposite the U.S. Embassy in Moscow on Wednesday, stripped to his underpants and tossed leaflets into the street, American diplomats said. The unidentified man was taken away by a Soviet rescue team after about 25 minutes, according to the diplomats. The man was presumed to be a protester, but all his leaflets had disappeared by the time the diplomats crossed the street to get one.

The diplomats said they had no idea what the man wanted. It was not known how the man reached the roof of the building, which is on one of

Top IRA Officer Reported to Defect

BELFAST (AP) — The Irish Republican Army in Belfast was reported to be in disarray Wednesday, with its deputy commander having turned informer after his arrest on the word of another guerrilla defector, an authoritative security source reported.

The source identified the latest police informer as Robert Lean, 47, executive officer of the Provisional IRA's Belfast Brigade, The source said Mr. Lean was arrested last week at his home in Belfast's Ballymurphy district after another IRA informer, William Skelly, implicated him in the 1981 murder of a police officer in a rocket attack in Belfast.

"He's one of the biggest fish we've caught," the source said. "He's named a lot of names, some of them very senior people in the Provisional IRA." Police spokesmen declined official comment on the report, but they confirmed that 17 persons suspected of being IRA activists, three of them women, were rounded up in dawn raids Tuesday after Mr. Lean named them and a score of other activists.

Transport Strike Slows Dublin Voting

DURLIN (AP) —A nationwide public transportation strike in Dublin slowed voting Wednesday in a referendum on whether to make a ban on abortion a part of the constitution.

All main city bus services were halted and train schedules were disrupted by the walkout of 16,000 workers of the state-run CIE transportation network. The workers are demanding a 20-percent pay increase that CIE has rejected.

Poll officials reported a "very low turnout" because of the strike, but light balloting had been expected because of confusion over what the referendum is about and because many voters believe it is unnecessary and divisive. The goal of the constitutional amendment is to block Parliament or the Supreme Court from legalizing abortion in the future.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopa (Reuters) — Delegates from African nations are to meet Sept. 17 to 19 in Addis Ababa for talks on resolving the conflict in the Western Sahara, where fighting has reportedly escalated recently, the Organization of African Umity secretariat said Wednesday.

The meeting was called by the organization's chairman, Mengistural Haile Mariam, the Ethiopian leader, who invited delegations from Guinea, Mali, Nigeria, Sietra Leone, Sudam and Tanzania to attend.

The warring factions in the conflict, Morocco and the Polisario Front, have also been invited. Polisario gnerrillas, supported by Libra, and

• Lebanese Army. Lebanon has rebuilt its army largely from scratch after it broke apart during the 1975-76 civil war. On paper, it has about 24,000 troops, but most analysts put its fighting strength at much less. Colonel Arthur Fintel of the U.S. Army, in charge of the American effort to rebuild the Lebanese Army, said recently that it could field 14,000 men in tactical units plus 10,000 in support units.

Colonel Fiotel has cited as the army's weaknesses its lack of experienced officers, poor logistical support and bad use of equipment. The United States is spending $150 million to train and equip the army and in the past year has sold it machine guns, 34 M-48 tanks and 107 armored personnel carriers.

About 60 percent of the enlisted men are Moslem and 40 percent are Christian. The officer corps has more Christians, ranging from a 70-30 ratio among majors to a 50-50 ratio in the top ranks. The army has no draft and relies on volun-

The militia, allied with leftist
Moslem militias and communist groups, has an estimated 4,000 fighters. Those in the Chuf are heavily armed, largely by Syria. According to Phalangists, the Druze also have been aided by Israel.

· Amal. This is both a leftist party and the militia of the Shiite Moslems, who make up about 30 percent of Lebanon's population. It claims to take no foreign support, existing solely from contributions. but Western diplomats say it gets arms from Syria and Iran and support from the Soviet Union.

Amal, which controls sections of southern coastal Lebanon, West Beirut and suburban areas, and Basibek in eastern Lebanon, says it has 100,000 militiamen; Western diplomats say it has fewer than 10,000 trained troops. · Syrians. The Arah Leagne formed an Arab Deterrent Force in 1976 to end Lebanon's civil war and the force was made up largely of Syrian Army troops. Twenty-five thousand to 35,000 are still there, most of them in the Beksa Valley and in northern Lebanon, including Tripoli. Last week the Lebanese government formally asked the Arab League to withdraw the deterrent force. · Palestinians. Ooly a small number of Palestinian forces remain in Lebanco since the PLO evacuation. About 6,000 are in the Bekaa Valley, with Syrian-backed factions fighting factions loyal to Yasser Arafat, and 2,000 are in the Tripob area.

Athens Protests Bonn Extraditions

ATHENS -- Greece, through its ambassador in Bonn, has issued a verbal protest over West Germany's extradition to Turkey of 36 political refugees, it was announced in Athens.

The Foreign Ministry said it was "surprised to be informed of the extradition of 36 Turkish fighters for democracy." It added that "the Greek government, the members of which have recently experienced the struggle against dictatorship, expresses its deep concern over the repeated extradition of Turkish traditions as well as the need for respect of elementary human rights and democratic liberties, including that of political asylum."

Greece has repeatedly rejected Turkish demands that political refugees who fled to Athens be extradited on the ground that they were guilty of terrorist acts. Weinberger Inspects 'Pacification' Effort in Salvador

SAN VICENTE, El Salvador - Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger inspected on Wednes-day a U.S.-supported military "pacification" pro-gram, aimed at cleaning leftist guerrillas from eastern El Salvador.

Mr. Weinberger flew to El Salvador from Panama City early in the morning, then went by heli-copter to San Vicente, 41 miles (66 kilometers) east of San Salvador, the capital.

He was accompanied by Langhorne A. Motley, assistant secretary of state for inter-American Affairs, and Henry E. Catto Jr., assistant secretary of defense for poblic affairs. The pacification program, financed and advised by the United States, is similar to one used by U.S. armed forces during the war in Vietnam. About 3,000 Salvadoran government soldiers, many of them trained by U.S. advisers, repelled rebel forces here in June and July. Since then, "reconstruction" teams have been repairing the war wreckage and encouraging displaced peasants to return and till their land.

On Tuesday, Mr. Weinberger visited U.S. troops training in a muddy rain forest in Panama and accused the Soviet Union of "enforcing the law of the jungle" in shooting down a South Korean

30 TEFL Teachers

Saudi Arabia

The Reason

Since 1981 Aramco, the world's largest oil producing company, has successfully recruited 60 TEFL/TESL teachers from the U.K. Currently we employ some 700 TEFL teachers of varied nationalities to instruct some 10,500 Saudi Arab trainees. With the recent opening of two new Industrial Training Centres, fully equipped with the latest teaching aids, we need an additional 30 TEFL teachers to contribute their own skills and experience to the development of this TEFL programme.

The Candidates

Degree or Cert. Ed. in English, Linguistics or Languages plus four years TEFL teaching experience. Degree or Cert, Ed. in other disciplines plus a PCCE with TEFL component or an RSA approved TEFL course plus four years TEFL teaching experience.

One of the new Industrial Training Centres in Dhahran.

c.£15,000 p.a. The Benefits

As the principal concessionaire developing the oil reserves of Saudi Arabia on behalf of the Saudi Arab government, Aramco can offer the security and range of facilities that virtually no other companies can match. In addition to an attractive salary, benefits include an indefinite term employment agreement for job security, subsidised food and accommodation, annual leave with return air fare and excellent sports and recreational facilities.

Initially employment will be on a bachelor/single status basis with the company also providing one additional annual return air ticket to allow wives to visit the Kingdom for a vacation. After one year's satisfactory employment, married status will normally be available.

Members of Aramco's training organisation are scheduled to visit London in the near future to conduct interviews. We would welcome enquiries from previous applicants who meet the minimum job requirements.

For an application form please write, including a brief c.v. (quoting ref: 8871/HT) to: John Nicholson, ARA International, 17-19 Maddox Street, London, WIR OEY.

By John Herbers New York Times Service

BATESVILLE, Mississippi — According to the Ceasus Bureau, there are 374 Hispanic people in Panola County, a sparsely settled area of small towns, farms, lakes

Yet a visitor who came here in search of them could find only one family with a Spanish surname in Batesville, the largest population center. And several local leaders who know the county well said there was no evidence of that many people of Spanish descent.

The Census Bureau has confirmed that it overcounted the number of Hispanics in areas throughout the nation where they have rarely been found in the past. The overcount, while relatively small compared with the total numbers nationally, created a misimpression among demographers that the nation's fastest-growing minority had established a foothold almost everywhere in the United States...

Because of the rise in ethnic price and the search for ancestral roots, the Census Bureau has set up a special division to try to classify the country's diverse population by national origin as well as by race. The 1980 census was the first that sought to determine the ancestry of every American. . .

The responses indicate that nany Americans do not know re they came from: For example, in a preliminary but thorough irvey the bureau conducted in 1979, 11 million people said they were of English descent only. But in the 1980 census twice that number, 23 million, gave the same re-sponse, a difference that could have come about because people were confused or were responding to oral questions in 1979 and written

Panola County reflects some of the problems encountered by the Census Bureau, Like bundreds of others, it is growing on the strength of its recreational facilities, its easy access to a metropolis - Memphis. Tennessee — and its job opportuni-ies in small factories. The 1980 census data indicated that such . So Panola County's mostly nonplaces were beginning to become more diverse as Hispanic people

But what happened, according to a special study by the Census Buau, was that in many cases blacks and whites alike mistakenly checked a Hispanic subgroup on

The burean issued a report in many years ago. Were there other June on its findings, based on the long census form that went to one in five tooks loke. It showed that "No," she replied in perfect English "We are the only ones."

more, 6 percent had said they were "American" or "United States," 10 percent had not answered, and 1 percent had given a religion or other explanation.

As expected, English, German, Irish, Afro-American, French, Italian, Scottish, Polish, Mexican, American Indian and Dutch, in that order, were the most common ancestry groups.

But bureau officials conceded that the results were subject to large errors, not only because of confusion but also because many people were apparently guessing about their heritage.

On the short form that went to the entire population, the bureau asked: "Is this person of Spanish-Hispanic origin or descent?" There were five possible answers: "No (not Spanish-Hispanic). Yes, Mexican, Mexican-Amer., Chicano. Yes, Puerto Rican. Yes, Cuban. Yes, other Spanish-Hispanic."

Yes, other Spanish-Hispanic." In states such as California, Tex-as, Florida, New York and Illinois, where there are substantial Hispanic populations, the burean's study found no overreporting. But in ar-eas such as Mississippi, where Hispanic people are rare, the number reported was frequently far in ex-cess of those actually there.

"Apparently many people did not know what a Mexican-American was, spotted the 'Amer.' on the form and marked it," said Edward W. Pernandez, chief of the ethnic and Spanish statistics branch of the bureau, "even though we had American abbreviated and squeezed in between Mexican and

The bureau is trying to decide on ossible revisions in its procedures, such as the types of questions to be

The best estimate, officials said, is that 275,000 non-Hispanic people nationwide said they were of Mexican origin, about 3.2 percent of the estimated 8.7 million people of Mexican heritage in the United States, But the Census Bureau decided that it was not worth the money or effort to find the precise figure, especially since the census is more than three years old.

Judge Grants Asylum to Pretoria Foe, Citing Danger If U.S. Deported Him

By Kevin Klose

CHICAGO — Dennis Brutus, an anti-apartheid poet and activist, has been granted political asylum in the United States by a judge who said Mr. Brums's life would be in danger if he were forced to return to his home country, Zimbabwe. Irving Schwartz, an immigration law judge, agreed with almost every point of Mr. Brutus's defense gainst the deportation order the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service first brought against him almost three years ago. Mr. Brutus's lawyers had contended his him out because of his vocal opposition to Pretoria's race laws.

Mr. Schwartz said the evidence presented by Mr. Brutus's lawyers at a hearing this summer showed that South Africa "clearly" seeks out its enemies and mobilizes squads that "go in and commit maybem or murder or even kidnap-

Mr. Brutus, 58, a tenured professor of English at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois, called the judge's decision "a politi-cal victory in the fight against racism." The Soviet Rendition

From Lies to Countercharges

The Soviet leaders have managed to turn one night of reckless aerial murder into a prolonged and ugly flight from responsibility.

They are conceding facts that they have known for days only as the evidence shoots down their original lies. They will regret this destruction of their new leader's credibility even more than they undoubtedly regret their air force's stupidity. They should quit trying to justify the unjustifiable and purge their consciences instead by joining other nations in constructive remedial action.

And Mr. Reagan, having shrewdly and moderately made his point, should out while he is ahead. The Russians made a grievous mistake that they found too bumiliating to confess. But they do not routinely massacre innocent travelers. They compounded the erfor with unsustainable denials and countercharges. But if not browbeaten mercilessly they will recognize the importance of safe transit and of channels of reliable communication with American leaders.

There is obviously on moral symmetry in the present arguments of the two superpowers. The Soviet Uninn owes itself and the world a burst of candor that can lead to agreements that make its aerial security consistent with safe international aviation. To proclaim a "right" to shoot down suspicious planes does not make it right to do so. The tragie consequences of a paranoid fear of border violations hardly justify making the Soviet people more paranoid. Surely, for the most self-interested reasons, the men in the Kremlin will eventually want to take measures that can prevent such cruel attacks in the future.

That is why Mr. Reagan is right to seek international rather than merely U.S. countermeasures. That is wby he is right to confine his measures mostly to the realm of aviation.

The technology that exposed so much of the truth after the fact can be harnessed to prevent comparable tragedy in the future. New rules for handling off-course planes are obviously needed. So are new rules of engagement inside the Soviet Air Force.

But sanctions alone will not make the Russians change their rules. They need to be accompanied by intensive diplomacy in which other nations seek benefit rather than triumph.

The United States, having spearheaded the quest for truth, now owes itself and the world a mature digestion of the facts. This tragic episode does not prove the perfidy of every Soviet deed any more than it proves the validity of every American action or arms program.

What has been so admirable about Mr. Reagan so far is his insistence on arguing from the evidence and tailoring his actions to the problem at issue. He, too, commands awesome power that can be misapplied. He, too, leads a fallible people, not a moral crusade.

Kremlin Brazens It Out Having shot down a Korean airliner, the Soviet Union appears determined to meet international protests by trying to shift the burden of fault to the United States. Its statements bristle with an evident intent to brazen it out. Some parts of the statements — that the airliner was flying without navigation lights, for instance — are directly contradicted by tapes of the Soviet pilots. The potentially most telling allegation — that the airliner emitted coded radio signals of a sort "usually used in transmitting intelligence information" -- was vague and undocumented. The personal abuse directed at President Reagan suggests that the Kremlin is reeling under the hard evidence made public, promptly, by the president and that it lacks confidence in its own case. Why are the Russians not seeking to cut their losses by admitting error and moving on with other business? Why are they acting in a self-indulgent, emotional and nationalistic way, one seeming to undercut the presumed Soviet interest in improving relations with the United States and Europe in particular?

Some part of the explanation rests on dim considerations of the Russian national psyche. The main part would seem to flow from a calculated political judgment. It is as though Mr. Andropov, once he realized an innocent airliner had been destroyed, took the course of least internal resistance: He decided to stand with the Soviet military and KGB against any other tendency to give priority to ties with

Washington and the world at large.

In doing the easy political thing, the Kremlin has failed to act on the obligation of a great power to do in small matters what must be done to maintain an atmosphere conducive to working on the big matters: reducing the dangers of nuclear war and moderating political disputes. Thus has it taken upon itself the responsibility for whatever degree of greater freeze in Soviet-U.S. relations may now ensue.

The president's television presentation Monday was at once firm and restrained. He supplied the details and analysis to bulwark America's collective outrage, but be did his part - even if Mr. Andropov has ont done his - to keep the United States on the important arms control negotiating track. That he coufined the action items to civil aviation measures within the political range of many different countries was sensible and not a little courageous, given the bitter disappointment felt by so many of his political supporters. We thought he stretched awkwardly and unnecessarily by making a pitch for the MX: The shock of Soviet conduct and his own measured handling of the crisis are likely to firm up support for his defense projects anyway. Meanwhile he is right to keep leaning on Moscow, with facts, for a fuller and more forthcoming response.

Soft-Pedaling the Boeing Incident Invites More Violence

BOSTON — A few days ago, a Soviet fighter deliberately executed 269 passengers and crew of a Korean airliner that had wandered and otherwise disagreeable the Soviet into Soviet space. Who had ordered regime may be - and few deny it is this barbarous act, we do not know: both - we have no choice but to "get It could have been Moscow, or it along" with it. (I leave ont of consideration What does this statement, for all its the possibility that the Soviet Air superficial plausibility, say? It says Defense Command had confused a Boeing 747 for a military aircraft:

It is somewhat easier to understand the atmosphere in which this outrage had been decided upon. One can eliminate the possibility that some faction in the Kremlin had engineered it to undercut a looming U.S.-Soviet rapprochement, since, press reports notwithstanding, nothing of the sort was as yet in the making. We can also dismiss as a cause Soviet paranoia about territorial integrity. For while it is true that the Soviet leaders are exceedingly sensitive to encroachments on their territory - and with good reason, because so much of it is stolen goods - there are more conventional ways of dealing with intruders. The point to keep in mind is that for the Soviet government, violence constitutes the basis of authority at home as well as abroad. It maintains control over its empire only because it has demonstrated repeatedly that it can beat off by force any challenges. And it enjoys superpower status solely because it has acquired the means to destroy much of humanity. Brutal power is so essential to its legitimacy, that it is not at all averse to making and fascism in Italy. an occasional display of it. On these same grounds, we have been previously urged not to speak out on Soviet violations of SALT lest we endanger START; not to publicize Soviet use of toxic weapons in Asia to the same end; and not to inquire too zealously into KGB involvement in the attempt on the life of the pope because evidence of complicity could prevent a Reagan-An-

Because in international relations there exist no courts to punish violators, their success depends entirely on the contracting parties' demonstrated readiness to respect law and moral standards. To isolate arms-control agreements from the remainder of Soviet activities is to cast doubt on the very viability of SALT and START. A power that habitually behaves in a lawless manuer in its non-nuclear activities cannot be expected to show scrupulous respect for law where nuclear issues are concerned.

This attitude amounts to giving Moscow immunity from the accepted norms of civilized behavior. It posi-

Nor does it countibute to a deceleration of the arms race because it encourages Moscow in the belief that the more awesome its nuclear arsenal, the greater the likelihood that its non-nuclear barbarities will be treated as mere incidents. And it surely does not improve the chances of peace masmuch as bad habits acquired in small matters have a way of spilling over into great ones.

Russians Offer Another Chapter in Politics of Fear

WASHINGTON — The tragedy of the downed South Korean airliner is a reminder of the politics of fear. We are not likely to be told by the Soviet Union wby these 269 lives were lost, for it is obviously terrified of the truth. Fear plays a larger part in the struggle for power and security than is generally realized. Throughout history in wars over religion, the dogmatic clash of dreams for eternal life, the fears and whisperings of contending theologies and personalities led to more and more conflicts and atrocities.

During World War I, the Allies were so afraid of Germany under the kaiser that they insisted on a policy of "total surrender" and punitive reparations. It was this policy, among others, that contributed, unintentionally, to a worldwide economic depression, and also to the rise of even more alarming and formidable political movements: communism in the Soviet Union, Nazism in Germany

The chances are that we will never know who gave the orders in the Soviet Union to shoot down the Ko-Napoleon and Hitler, the fear of being overwhelmed by the computer fear of freedom; the fear of satellites shing-2 nuclear missiles in West Germ space and U.S. reconnaissance planes snooping with electronic gadgets into Soviet strategic hideouts. In this fearsome and suspicious atmosphere, it is not hard to imagine that the Korean plane's intrusion into So-viet territory could lead to confusion and a tragic blunder.

If the leaders of the Soviet Union with its controlled press, radio and television tell the people every day that the United States is the enemy and is trying to spy on its strategic areas and overthrow its government, it is scarcely surprising that its air command and pilots shoot first and learn the facts later.

The easy and popular explanation of the Korean plane disaster is that Yuri Andropov, the Soviet leader, was in charge and ordered it, or that be was out to lunch and knew nothing about it - neither of which is a very happy thought.

Ever since Mr. Andropov took over from Leonid Brezhnev, be has been trying to persuade President Reagan to reduce the U.S. military budget and to sell him grain and gas pipelines and other technology.

He has also been trying to per-suade the governments of Western Europe not to deploy cruise and Permany. Britain and Italy, and has been working on the "peace movement" in Europe, Japan and the United States to get it to believe that the Soviet Union is a model of peace and defender of human rights. Whereupon, Soviet aircraft shoot an unarmed cirilian airplane into the Sea of Japan and even refuse to allow the families of the dead to recover the bodies.

Even if you assume that this tragic affair was a case of mistaken identity - which takes quite a stretch of imagination — the Soviet response to it has been so bizarre, so indifferent to the human tragedy and so vicious in its charges against the United States and the South Koreans that it can be explained only by the Russians' pathological fear of freedom. The act of destroying the plane was bad enough, and might even have been explained as human error, but the official coverup was even worse. For every deceptive official statement out of Moscow has left a drop of poison in U.S.-Soviet relations and added to the politics of fear - which from the end of their alliance in World War II is what has kept them from working together for a sane and decent order in the world. "We must out imagine," the British historian Herbert Butterfield wrote, that all is well if our armaments make the enemy afraid; for it is possible that, at least in the 20th century, it is fear more than anything else which is the cause of war.

"However hard we have tried in the 20th century to make allowances in advance for the unpredictable con-sequences of war." he continued, "we have always discovered that the most terrible of these have been omitted from our calculations or only imperfectly foreseen. One of the examples of the fact is the loss of liberty in various countries in Eastern Europe and the Balkans — the very regions whose freedom was the primary issue for which we were supposed to have undertaken two world wars."

The Russians have no monopoly on the politics of fear. As Mr. Andropov is practicing it on the United States, Mr. Reagan is practicing it on them as the "source of all evil."

And even in the United States, at the beginning of the presidential election of 1984, the old sad appeals to "fear" are starting to be heard - that if Mr. Reagan is re-elected, or re-placed by Walter Mondale or John Glenn, all will be lost. It is a foolish argument in both domestic and foreign politics, but the appeal to fear is andard political procedure.

De la Madrid's Success

Mexico's President Miguel de la Madrid had reason to feel satisfied when he delivered his first state of the nation speech last week, and so did the international bankers who have invested so much in Mexico, an important nation in deep financial trouble.

Although Mexico's economic problems are still serious, a fact that De la Madrid acknowledged in his annual "informe," conditions have improved in the 10 months since he was sworn into office. Unfortunately, the evidence of that is mainly statistical, and the effects have yet to reach the average Mexican.

"I am aware that the crisis has not been overcome," De la Madrid told Mexico's Congress. "The only thing my government can affirm is that the deepest and greatest aspects are under control." Indeed, it appears that they are. Inflation, running at 100 percent a year ago, is down to 30 percent, and is expected to slow even further before the end of the year. Bank deposits are up, meaning that fewer Mexicans are taking their money out of the country. The government's reserves of hard currency are also up, from $1.77 billion when De la Madrid took office to $3.55 billion now. And dollars are again flowing into the country, thanks to a surge in tourism and steady oil sales to the United States, for which Mexico is now the largest supplier in the world.

Almost immediately after taking office. De la Madrid turned to the International Monetary Fund for assistance, and it responded with $3.9 billion in emergency loans. But, as it often does, the fund demanded severe austerity measures in exchange. To reduce the goverument budget deficits from 18 percent of the gross domestic product to 8.5 percent, De la Madrid cut state spending dramatically. He even took politically unpopular steps like eliminating government subsidies on milk, bread and other food staples, and limiting wage increases for Mexico's workers.

There Is Nothing Benign About Assad By Amos Perlmutter

WASHINGTON — A curious process sometimes comes into play when the West casts its eye on Middle Eastern one-man regimes. The process is a form of canonization or the equivalent of it.

In the minds of Western policymakers looking for solutions to difficult problems, the leaders - onetime radicals, despots, usurpers - become not saints but moderates. In the process, the policymakers, grasping at straws, submit themselves to a willful and blissful act of amnesia. "

It happened to Saddam Hussein of Iraq. It happened to the Palestine Liberation Organization's Yasser Arafat. Now it is happening to Hafez al-Assad, Syria's President.

The Reagan administration, frantically searching for a way to save a where that country's Christian goverument is falling apart at the seams, now thinks the last-gasp solution lies in Damascus. Ergo, President Assad has become a moderate — despite the conspicuous absence of any sign that be would be remotely accommodating to a peaceful solution in Lebanon. But the continuing Lebanese stalemate, including the skirmishing involving U.S. marines and other nations' members of the multinational force, not to mention Mr. Assad's malicious behavior in the region generally, makes it imperative to examine this alleged savior more carefully. A lonk at the Assad record and history will show just how futile it is to place any bope in him. The record is one of sustained violence, deviousness, self-interest and implacable bostility to the United States. Hafez al-Assad came to power in 1966 in a brutally engineered coup in which some 400 high-ranking Sunni

Moslem officers were killed or exiled. Mr. Assad, a member of the minority Alawis, in 1970 then turned on his partner Salah Jadid in another comp, this time victimizing fellow Alawis and Druze whom he perceived as a threat. In 1973, Mr. Assad joined with Egypt in a joint attack on Israel for which Syria suffered heavily.

Yet in all that time he was seen by the West as a force for stability and political continuity in Syria. This he knont and the jail cell. Mr. Assad flourishes, and persists, in Syria as a despot who brooks on opposition. This was amply demonstrated two years ago when, threatened by a fundamentalist rebellion of Sunnis, he acted quickly and in bloody fashion, nearly razing the city of Hamma, which beadquartered the main source of the rebellion. In the process, an estimated 30,000 civilians were killed.

His record in Lebanon is twisting and violent. Once Lebanon's civil war began, Mr. Assad became a pobtical whirling dervish, first supporting the Christians against the Palestinians, then supporting the PLO against the Christians. Syria, in effect, maintained the PLO within Lebanon until the PLO had what seemed like a permanent military base and a state within a state. The ultimate result was to leave Mr. Assad with a stranglehold on more than 50 percent of Lebanon. Yet it was Mr. Assad, seeing the PLO weakened after its losing fight with the Israelis, who instigated the revolt within the PLO against Mr. Arafat, a revolt that led to the ouster of Mr. Arafat from Syria. So much for old friends.

Since the end of the Lebanese war, Mr. Assad has consistently rebuffed any efforts to find a peaceful solution. He has adamantly refused to consider withdrawing Syrian troops unless Israel withdrew first, thus effectively making mush of the Israel-Lebanese peace agreement.

Syrian machinations are behind the Druze and Arab assault on the fragile Lebanese government of President Amin Gemayel. There are even strong and persistent rumors that Syrian efforts were behind the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, the assassination of Amin's brother, Bashir Gemayel, and the recent shooting of the marines.

On a broader scale, Mr. Assad has been a consistent roadblock to U.S. peace efforts. Syria refused to accept is one of the most virulent members of the Arab rejectionist front against Camp David, Mr. Assad is a strong supporter and ally of fundamentalist Iran and the Libyan leader Colonel Moamer Qadhafi.

It is futile to think that the U.S. special envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, will fare well with Mr. Assad especially after Mr. Assad unceremoniously refused to see his predecessor, the highly respected Philip C. Habib. which amounted to a slap in the face for the United States. To court President Assad is plain foolhardiness on the part of the Administration. He is about as benign as a fox in a chicken coop. He is ont now and never has been a moderate nor is he a potential friend. He is doing everything in his power to keep Lebanon's nominal government in disarray. He has no intention of leaving. Mr. Assad is the darkness at the end of the Lebanon tunnel.

On the Death of Senator Henry Jackson

WASHINGTON — A silly person once said that only silly persons have heroes. But only exceptionally small people will not acknowledge the exceptionally large persons among us. Heroes make vivid the values by which we try to live. I say, with many others: Henry Jackson was my hero.

He was an insoluble problem for the image-tinkers and a splendid puz-zle for the label-makers who infest contemporary politics. Because he was uninterested in the cosmetics of politics, dull persons considered him dull. Discerning persons considered his kind of character as exciting as it is rare. Persons who, under the pressure of fashion, are as flexible as fly rods found Mr. Jackson incomprebensible. They came to the absurd conclusion that he had departed from the liberal tradition.

He was a pioneer of environm talism. He was the preeminent champion of civil rights. He fought for the full domestic agenda and anthored legislation that put teeth into U.S. pronouncements on behalf of Jews and others persecuted by the Soviet regime. And if Mr. Jackson's proposals for substantial force reductions had been adopted, we might have had arms limitation agreements that actually limit arms.

Mr. Jackson was one of those persons - Felix Frankfurter was another - whose constancy was mistaken for change. He never wavered from his party's traditional belief that there is no incompatibility between government with a caring face at home and government with a stern face toward adversaries. From Wilson confronting Lenin and FDR confronting Hitler, through Truman confronting Stalin, Kennedy confronting Castro and Johnson confronting Ho Chi Minh, the Democratic Party has been the foremost opponent of this century's foremost evil — totalitarianism. Regarding "Companies Planning Ahead for Computer Disasters: We're Talking About Survival" and "Report Estimates Potential Toll of A-Strike on Russia" (IHT, Aug. 25):

Thanks for the reassuring news 165,000,000 Americans and 100,000,000 Russians (ont to mention countless other millions around the world) may be killed in an all-out U.S.-Soviet nuclear war. But "several hundred of the largest corporations" will be safely tucked away in bombproof caveras.

Well-Mannered Children

Regarding "Teaching Children a Lost Art" (IHT, Aug. 23): I am pleased that Joan Coles is making money out of teaching eti-quette to children.

social consequences.
"Compulsive gambling is a behavioral illness, and those caught up in it will do anything to get their hands on the money needed to gamble — anything at all," Mr. Klein said —a comment more than borne out by the anecdotes of a dozen members of Gamblers Anonymous who met recently in a dilapidated building two blocks from the billion-dollar row of casinos where some of its members have lost everything they owned, and their self-respect as well.

Most were still hunched less if my wife and three kids starved," a member named Don est weekend of the busiest year U.S. said. He gazed at the floor as he described how his gambling compulsions had cost him his home, his business and his family.

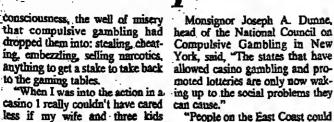

Don said that on that very morning, while cating breakfast in a diner, he had stolen a woman's purse, found $400 in it, and was about to head for one of the casinos. He said it was only with the greatest of effort that he had forced himself to go back and return the purse to its

"I just wish there was a pill I could take to put an end to these urges," be said in a voice shaking with emotion.

Dave, another member, said: "When I'm in the casinos I feel as though I'm on top of the world. It's an ego trip. I absolutely lose control of myself."

All members of the group con-lessed that their compulsion had led them to contemplate suicide; most admitted to criminal acts to raise money; several had been con-victed and jailed, and most were deeply in debt, saying it would take years to make good on all their obligations to relatives, friends and loan sharks.

Such meetings with similar sto-ties are on the increase as the number of members of Gamblers Anonymous mounts. Since the first casinos opened here in 1978, the organization's chapters in New Jersey have tripled to 37, while the number of chapters in New York City and its suburbs has doubled, Discussing the growth of gambling on the East Coast, Francis X. Fee, director of finance for the Commission, said: "There seems to market that has developed in the last several years, a market the commission did oot anticipate." He noted that the nine casinos here will have gross revenues of $2 bilhon this year.

According to gambling special-ists, the rise in the oumber of chapters of Gamblers Anonymous on the East Coast since the casinos opened here is oo coincidence. They see a direct link between the availability of gambling and compulsive gambling. Psychologists at the University of Michigan conducted a survey of gambling habits for the National Gambling Commission, a study group created by Congress in 1970. They concluded in a report published in 1976 that 1.1 percent of Americans were "probable" com-pulsive gamblers, while 2.6 percent "possible" compulsive gam-

UALA LUMPUR — A tiny weevil one-eighth of an inch (30 millimeters) long has become the star of Malaysia's most recent success story - the burgeoning palm-oil industry.

Elacidobius kamerunicus has raised palm-oil production by at least $100 million a year and saved plantations millions more in labor costs in the 21/2 years since it arrived from West Africa.

The weevil is one of the most important biological innovations in the industry," said Professor Augustine Ong, chemistry and technology director for the Palm Oil Research Institute of Malaysia.

"It has increased production and eliminated the costs involved in hiring buman pollinators, who are oow free to do other wark."

The institute imported more than 1,000 weevils from Cameroon and released them in February 1981. The weevil bas spread throughout the country's bundreds of giant oil-palm estates and boosted output by as much as 24 percent. in 1982, Malaysia, the world's largest palm-oil producer, harvested more than 3.5 million tons oearly I million tons more than in 1981, an increase experts credit to the pollinating efficiency of the weevil.

New Early Test Traces Birth Defects

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - Scientists have discovered a new technique that will enable doctors to diagnose birth defects and a baby's sex within the first 10 weeks of pregnancy, Science magazine reported.

This was as much as two months earlier than the current testing method of amniocentesis, in which a small amount of fluid is drawn from the sac around the embryo, the magazine said.

The oew test is performed by removing and analyzing hairlike projections on the membrane surrounding the embryo, which disappear by about the 10th week of pregnancy. The magazine said the test, already used to determine sex in China and the Soviet Union, and now being studied in the United States and Europe, could be relatively easily performed, by inserting a thin, hollow tube into the woman's cervix and using suction to pull away parts of the projections, or villi.

Human Plague Deaths Rose in 1982

GENEVA (AP) - The oumber of deaths around the world from buman plague rose in 1982 to 36, the World Health Organization says.

In 1982 there were 713 cases reported, compared to the record low in 1981 of 194 cases and 25 deaths, the WHO said.

The largest oumber of cases were found in Africa, on Uganda's border with Zaire (153 cases and three deaths), in Tanzania (36 cases and three deaths), in Madagascar (36 cases and 19 deaths) and for the first time in 10 years in South Africa (19 cases and one death). The United States reported 19 cases and three deaths from seven Southern states.

LA JOLLA, California (UPI) - Researchers say they have developed "a very successful" bone marrow cleaning process aimed at curing acute lymphocytic leukemia.

WALL STREET WATCH

By EDWARD ROHRBACH

Shoplifting-Surveillance Companies Find Profits in a Growing Crime Wave

I's not a pretty picture: shoplifters robbing storeowners to the time of I more than $50 billion a year worldwide.

But Wall Street has been doing its part to build a better mousetrap and stean or cash in on — the rising wave of piltering. Among the stock market's best performers have been companies in the so-called electronic Inticle surveillance industry.

These companies reported revenues of $90 million last year and anticipate a continued annual growth rate of 25 to 30 percent (compared with shoplifting's estimated 20 percent yearly increase) for deterrents.

The systems have

"It's a high-technology industry," said Arthur J. Minasy, president of Knogo, the first company to enter the EAS field in 1966. Knogo, with a factory in Belgium, does more than half its business outside the United States.

FEET BARBLE

That the EAS industry has so far only penetrated 5 percent of the retail market, mainly apparel merchandise, strongly favors "significant future growth" for the industry, according to E. Gray Glass 3d, analyst for Kidder Peabody.

But what excites him is that "an EAS system in its potentially most advanced state can be applied wherever it is necessary to keep track of something that moves or can be moved." Examples: Units coming down a production line, rental cars and ship containers, airline luggage, movable medical equipment in a hospital — even pets.

Mr. Glass rates Sensormatic Electronics, the dominant company in the field, as a "core holding" in EAS. In the longer term, Knogo and Checkpoint Systems, the two next largest, are "attractive."

Loren Brayerman, analyst for Mertill Lynch, calls Sensormatic a huy

Paine Webber's Robert Sullivan notes that Knogo's incoming orders are mining 50 percent ahead of last year. "But at 25 times next year's EPS fearnings per sharel estimate, the stock carries above average risk and is suitable only for longer term portfolios," he said.

Not so enamoured with Sensormatic, however, is David Altman of Not so enamoured with Sensonmanic, nowever, its David Admand of Goldman Sachs. While he is "very comfortable with Sensonmanic's fundamentals," he thinks that the high price/earnings ratio at 40 times this year's estimated profits leaves little on a stock-valuation basis.

One of Sensonmanic's early fans who continues to favor it is Equity Research Associates. Since John Westergaard put the stock on Equity's buy list in 1977, the stock has risen 2,000 percent.

American District Telegraph, which offers an alarm system connected to telephones that protects homes and offices from burglars, is the type of service company that Philippe Tripet, research director at Bordier & Co., Geneva, believes has a good chance to "rotate up" on Wall Street in the next change of market leadership.

Stefan D. Abrams, chairman of Oppenheimer's stock-selection committee, sees parallels between recent stock market performance and the summer of 1975, when interest rates backed up nearly two full points as the recovery took hold. That year, he noted, in the first significant correction of what became of a long bull market, the broad averages pulled back more than 15 percent.

"Many came to believe that the bull market was over," he recalled.

Mr. Abrams said a lack of solid market leadership and a failure to convince investors that the rise in interest rates is over has been holding back this market. But he is bullish and expects that leadership in the "next leg is likely to focus even more selectively on companies having the strongest relative earnings gains." Oppenheimer's recommendations include: International Paper, PPG Industries, Lubrizol, Witco, DeKalb AgResearch and Deere, along with Armstrong World and Owens-Corning Fiberglass.

Rates in U.S. Threaten Fixed-Rate Mortgages

By Leonard Sloane New York Times Service

NEW YORK — U.S. fixed-rate mortgages, which forced some thrift institutions to the brink of insolvency and hurt many others a few years ago when interest paid to depositors soared, have made a comeback. But the recent upward trend in interest rates threatens to again reduce their numbers.

When interest rates are relatively low, as they were during the first half of 1983, consumers want fixed-rate mortgages to lock up favorable monthly payments for the duration of the loan. Lenders, who attracted billions of dollars from depositors with their new money-market deposit accounts, gave the customers what they wanted. This situation is changing, though, as rates rise. "We're seeing that once we cross 12½ or 13 percent, people don't qualify for fixed rates any more and they get adjustable rates," said Kenneth Abt, president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Middletown,

In an adjustable-rate mortgage, the interest rate is adjusted upward or downward periodically according to a specified formula that reflects current market rates.

Farlier this year, it was a different story. Despite the wide-scale introduction and broad market penetration of adjustable-rate mortgages, the standard fixed-rate mortgage dominated lending activity in the first six or seven months.

Many U.S. financial institutions, moreover, are holding large oumbers of these fixed-rate mortgages in their portfolios, which could result in what bankers call "underwater portfolios" if interest levels soar and rates paid to depositors exceed that charged to borrowers.

"For the savings and loan business, the long-term fixed-rate mortgage which stays on your books represents the closest thing I can think of to financial arsenic," said Edwin J. Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. "The only real known antidote is the adjustable-rate mortgage."

Mr. Gray's concern is based on statistics tabulated by his agency. They show that the percentage of fixed-rate mortgages issued by savings and loan associations rose from a low of 54 percent of the total in August 1982 to 73 percent in July 1983. Adjustable-rate mortgages declined correspondingly.

A study issued in late July by General Electric Mortgage Insurance Companies points up the strength this year of the fixed-rate phenome-non. Of the 400 savings and loan associations surveyed, 61 percent reported that conventional fixed-rate mortgages represented more than half of their volume and 48 percent ooted that they planned to retain these mortgages in their portfolios.

"I think it's somewhat of a potential problem," said Diane Cortes, director of marketing research for General Electric Mortgage. "They acknowledge that the mortgages are for a portfolio and there's a high probability that interest rates will increase at any time."

Such a problem existed at many institutions in 1980 and 1981 when

China to Resume Purchasing U.S. Farm Products

By Michael Parks Los Angeles Times Service

BELJING - China is resuming porchases of U.S. agricultural products and synthetic fibers that were suspended Jan. 19 in a trade dispute over Chinese texuile exports to the United States, Chinese offi-cials said Wednesday. But China appears unlikely now to meet its commitment to purchase a minimum of 6 million metric tons (6.6 million short tons) of grain this year.

Qi Huaiyuan, a Foreign Ministry spokesman, said that China would start buying U.S. grain and other agricultural products. The ancouncement comes about three weeks after China and the United States signed a five-year agreement oo limited growth of Chinese tex-tile exports to the United States.

Earlier, Shen Jueren, director of the foreign trade administration of the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relacions and Trade, formally lifted the ban on new contracts for purchases of U.S. cotton, soybeans and synthetic fibers. The Chinese ban, which included reduction of planned imports of other agricultural products, was taken in retaliation for the Reagan administracion's unilateral imposition of quotas on Chinese textile sales in the United States after negotiations on a new textile agreement became deadlocked. As a result, Sino-U.S. trade plummeted 25 percent in the first seven months of this year, according to U.S. Commerce Department figures, and U.S. exports to China fell 42 percent.

Total Sino-U.S. trade through July was only $2.4 billion, with the United States running a $119-million deficit in contrast to past sur-

Two-way trade for this year will probably not exceed $4.5 billion, owing to the reduced agricultural purchases, Last year's trade totaled $5.2 billion, with the United States showing a $628-million surplus. But actual U.S. sales are likely to be very limited, according to U.S. trade specialists and agricultural industry representatives here.

WHAT'S GREAT FOR PLEASURE

CAN BE BAD FOR BUSINESS.

China has increased its soybeans plantings and has had several good harvests. The same is true of cotton, though Beijing might buy some special types of cotton in small quantities. China had advised U.S. exporters last year that it would be reducing its purchases of polyester fibers sharply this year as new petrochemical plants went into China is committed, however, to a minimum purchase of 6 million metric tons of grain this year under bilateral agreement with the United States similar to the one Washington recently concluded with the Soviet Union.

Beijing appears unable to fullfill the agreement. So far, it has shipped 2.6 million metric tons of grain, and there is very little prospect that it can ship the balance by the end of the year.

China, as a result, runs a risk of being accused of failing to honor its commitments if a compromise, such as averaging the sales over the next two years, is not reached in discussions expected in October or November with Agriculture Department officials in Washington.

Britain Posts Trade Deficit

LONDON - Britain recorded a seasonally adjusted current account deficit of £313 million ($470 million) in the second quarter, after an upward revised first-quarter surplus of £779 million, the treasury said, The current account is a broad trade measure that includes merchandise and oonmerchandise items. Trade in merchandise in the quarter showed a deficit of £654 million, far wider than the first quarter's £194-million deficit. But trade in conmerchandise items showed a surplus of £341 million, down from the £973 surplus in the first quarter.

Mitsubishi Industries Predicts Rise in Profit

Reuters

TOKYO — Mitsubishi Heavy Industries said Wednesday that its profit for the year ending March 31 is expected to rise sharply from 24.48 billion yen ($99.68 million) in the previous year because of improved business in its shipbuilding division

The yen's weakness against the dollar will also improve export profitability, said the company, which declined to estimate the profit. Securities house sources said they expect the company's profit be nearly 50 billion yen.

S&P reported that profits as a percent of sales for companies in its 400 industrials index averaged 3.95 percent in 1982 — or 3.95 cents on the dollar.

"Last year's dismal profit margin performance reflected the effects of one of the worst recessions since the end of World War II," S&P chief economist David Blitzer said. The survey showed that last year's return of 3.95 percent repre-formance, and was the lowest return since 1952. The previous low since that time was the 4.63 percent recorded in 1975; the high of 6.82 percent oc-ented a decline of nearly 19 percent from 1981's 4.86-percent per-

Mr. Blitzer said that "corporate profits were off more than 18 percent in the 1981-82 recession. By comparison, profits fell by about 12 percent in the 1973-75 reversal." The economist said that although profit margins continued to deteriorate in the early stages of 1983 - the 400 industrials averaged a 3.68-percent return in the first quarter and improved to 4.29 percent in the second quarter they are likely to continue to improve through the end of the year.

"For many industries, things did not start to move until the second quarter, when consumer spending took a major stride upward, boosting sales and cash flow," Mr. Blitzer said.

"We expect to see continued economic growth, with second-half corporate profits showing gains of 25 to 35 percent over the second half of 1982."

In the study, of the 66 industry groups included, only 19 managed to improve their margins in 1982, while 45 declined, one stayed even and one recorded a second consecutive deficit year. The offshore-drilling industry showed the widest profit margin in the S&P study — 21.7 percent — followed by crude-oil producers (12.9 percent), drugs (10.7 percent), oil-well equipment and service (9.7 percent) and newspaper publishing (8.9 percent).

Mr. Blitzer said that the wide margins in offshore drilling were largely the result of favorable contracts dating back to the 1980-81 short-term rates soared and depositors earned high levels of interest. Banks and thrift institutions that had large quantities of 30-year fixed-rate mortgages on their books were earning lower rates and thereby suffered from a so-called "negative spread" that caused a wave of closings and forced mergers.

In other words, the banks were paying more for their new mortgages than they were taking in from their old ones. The concern is not today's

Japanese Firms See Slow Upturn

TOKYO - Japan's major corporations see economic conditions in Japan slowly improving, according to a quarterly survey released Wednesday by the Bank of Japan

The central bank's survey covering the outlook for 7,021 businesses, including 521 major corporations - indicated an economic upturn due to a rebound in exports, a reduction of inventories and increases in sales and production.

But the Bank of Japan refrained from concluding that the economy is poised for significant expansion, noting that domestic demand remains slug-

Coleco Says Its New Home Computer Will Have Innovative Memory Device

By Eric N. Berg New York Times Service

HARTFORD, Connecticut -Coleco Industries has claimed a major breakthrough in manufacturing an inexpensive memory device for home computers. The maker of video games, which is just starting to make computers, said Tuesday that it had developed a tape drive - similar to a tape recorder -- that would shuffle information between the memory and the screen of a computer terminal as quickly and efficiently as the more complex, commonly used floppy-disk drive. A floppy disk stores information on a re-

The announcements were made at a news conference at Coleco's Hartford headquarters. Reporters and Wall Street analysts were able to see Adam closely for the first time and to handle it.

Coleco said the change would increase Adam's speed in searching for and retrieving data from memory and would also improve its ability to do "multi-tasking" - several assignments at the same time.

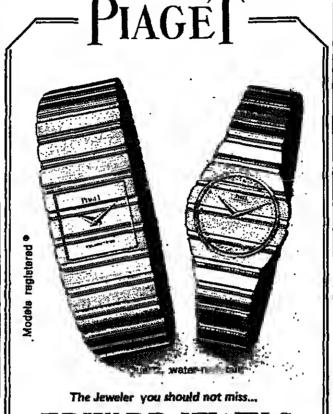

Coleco said the new computer would have about 80,000 bytes, or units, of internal memory and that it would use the Zilog Z-80 microprocessor, made by a subsidiary of Exxon Corp. The machine will not operate with any computer programs now on the market, but Coleco said it would soon be issuing a Wall Street analysts said that over-the-counter sales of ibuprofen, currently marketed in the United States only by prescription, could disrupt the more than $2billion markets for nonprescription pain relievers and prescription anti-arthritis drugs.

Analysts, fearing a possible loss of market share for many established drugs and a costly advertising battle, already have lowered ratings of several pharmaceutical company stocks.

Ibuprofen, a nonsteroidal antiinflammatory drug, has been touted as an effective pain reliever with fewer side-effects than aspirin. It currently is marketed in the United States as Motrin by Upjohn Co. under a license from Britain's Boots Plc.

President Ronald Reagan had said his "supply side" program of tax cuts and federal spending cuts would assure solid growth without inflation and would put an end to crippling recessions. Interest rates would fall and industry would pump millions of individuals' taxliberated nest eggs into the fac-tories and machinery that would provide the jobs and growth of the Personal savings, recorded in the Commerce Department's national income accounts of growth and decline of the economy, is the amount remaining after all consumer spending is subtracted from all after-tax consumer income. Personal savings in the United States totaled $125 billion last year, $10 billion less than in 1981.

Few economists bemoan the consumer buying binge in this year's second quarter, when spend-ing jumped 9.7 percent after rising only 2.9 percent in the first quarter. rated the economy's recovery from the recession to a rollicking 9.2-percent pace after the 2.6percent level of the first quarter. A binge, however, is followed by the morning after.

"It's peculiar, against this backdrop of the recession, about how taxes were going to encourage sav-ing," remarked Barry P. Bosworth, a Brookings Institution senior fellow who was former President Jimmy Carter's wage and price director. "It has gone the whole other way," he said. "It is a consumer-led recovery, not an investment-led reand gift taxes. And it liberalized the counts, permitting any worker to deduct $2,000 a year from his in-come to provide for his retirement. Economists find it remarkable that more consumers have not responded to other inducements tosave — the high interest rates on debt securities and the money market deposit accounts that federal regulators now permit banks and savings institutions to offer.

A common explanation is pentup demand. A decade of inflationeroded wages, the brief recession in 1980 and then the 17-month 1981-82 recession had so what consumer appetites, a Treasury official said, that a spending explosion in the recovery was inevitable. Expectation of the final, 10-percent cut in tax rates also fed the binge.

This official, who asked not to be named, added that some consumers - stock market investors have experienced such enormous put money into traditional savings.

"This is very important," said Michael Boskin, an economist at Stanford University who was a member of the Reagan task force that put together the administratioo's post-election economic policies. "In the stock market, hnndreds of billions of dollars of wealth has been created. To many

HARMONY is 38 years old, soon to be 39, a showgirl at a Las Vegas casino called the Stardust. She hasn't seen her husband, Ross, for 14 years; her 16-year-old daughter, Pepper, is conducting a rebellion the latest incident in which involves a man nearly three decades her senior; her current boyfriend, Denny, has in fairly rapid succession caused her Visa card to be cancelled, wrecked her automobile, stolen a $1,300 insurance check, and run out on her; and though a few years ago she "had been said by some to have the best legs in Las Vegas and maybe the best bust too," she is now hanned by the awareness that a career founded not in talent but in beauty is rapidly fading away. These are hard times for Harmony, in other words, but you'd hardly hardly know it from her cheerful manner. Harmony is a romantic, which "just meant you were a little more tender about things and liked to think about the good kinds of things that could happen rather than the bad kinds of things, which there were enough of, there was no point in dwelling on them." To the hardness and cruelty of the world. Harmony turns a tender cheek:

"For herself she didn't worry too much, she still loved being in the show, plus there was a lot to like about life if you could make a little effort and look on the bright side. Even a nice morning was a form of happiness, plus having a sweet guy around for a while was another form, a major form actually, major even if usually sort of brief in her experience."

To be sure, every once in a while life just gets too complicated for Harmony and she "would feel a sinking, she would start getting low and then it was like something was falling, like she couldn't keep a high heart anymore no matter how much she tried," and when those low times come she slides into some serious crying. But those downs don't last long because, as her friend Gary puts it, among her "most wonder-ful skills" is an "ability to see the bright side." Gary says, "I love that about you, it takes courage, you know," and he is right: in her innocent, chipper, plucky, unaffected way Harmony is as courageous a character as one could hope to meet. She thinks of herself as weak, and constantly berates herself for what she perceives as her manifold shortcomings, but in fact she is remarkably strong; she has the force of character to take life on its own terms, and the presence of mind to roll with the hard punches it deals out.

For these reasons, and for many others as well, it is quite impossible not to fall in love with Harmony while reading "The Desert Rose," Larry McMurtry's minth novel. That it is unquestionably one of his best novels may well be because McMurtry himself fell in love with her while writing it. Invariably, it seems, his most successful books have at their centers women who are strong, sexy, generous, humor-ous: Molly in "Leaving Cheyenne," Ruth in "The Last Picture Show," Aurora in "Terms of Endearment," now Harmony in "The Desert Rose." Certainly it is true that McMurtry is an accomplished comic writer and a satirist of considerable bite — there is ample evidence of both gifts in "The Desert Rose" — but he is at his most appealing when he writes, with deep compassion and sympathy, about these tough, patient women who in every important respect outclass the men who use and occasionally abuse them: The sadness of men, once it got into their eyes, affected [Harmony] a lot, she sort of couldn't bear it and would usually try and make it go away if the circumstances permitted her to, often they didn't but sometimes they did, it was mainly a desire to kiss their sadness away that had caused her to bring so many of them home. Old or young, fat or thin didn't matter so much although definitely fat rather than thin if she was given a choice, she was not so drawn to the skinny guys, it was just that she sometimes got the sense that she overwhelmed them, after all she was pretty tall and had a good bust and a few of them had sort of seemed to feel that they were being smoth-

Out of the genuine goodness of her ample heart, Harmony is a pushover. Gary, a homosexual who is wardrobe manager for the Stardust floorshow, "once he even acted a little superior and told her she was like a beautiful car. a Mercedes or something, that had everything it needed except brakes." She's just a great big bundle of love; even when the sudden disappearance of her latest man leaves her heartsick, she doesn't pine for long and is ready for the next bout of happiness when it shows up - as in fact it always does. She is grateful for any little blessing, and she is sharp enough to recognize a real blessing when she sees one. In "The Desert Rose," as in all of McMurtry's most skillful work, the central figure is supported by a brilliant cast of secondary characters: Gary, her most abiding friend, "the thing that made him such a wonderful friend was that when you were really in trouble it never entered his head to criticize"; Myrtle, her neighbor, "a tiny redhead in her early 60s who had no intention of letting age or anything else get in the way of pleasure"; Pepper, her gifted but self-absorbed daughter; Mel, Pepper's 45-year-old fiance, whose peculiarities disguise a kind, patient and understanding temperament; Jackie Bonventre, the brassy and seemingly heartless manager of the casino floorshow who reveals himself, in an important moment, to have a more sensitive understanding of human behavior and needs than might have been expected.

These characters and others give the novel an agreeable busyness, a sense of people going about their separate and interlocking lives in just the manner that real people do. Las Vegas itself is not an aggressive presence here as it is in John Gregory Dunne's "Vegas" or Hunter Thompson's "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas," but a strange place the oddities of which its residents take for granted as components of their normal lives. McMurtry has chosen to narrate the story in the cool, breezy argot of the place, and the device works handsomely, making a seamless whole out of dialogue and de-

The Desert Rose" is as likeable as anything McMurtry has written, but that is not intended as a wishy-washy compliment. To the contrary, it takes great skill and sensitivity to pinpoint the resilience and decency of Harmony, who in a less rounded portrait might have been a mere caricature of the dumb beauty with a heart of

ON the diagrammed deal, South landed in six hearts as shown, after a slow start in the auction.

He chose to pass with the south hand, but then showed a powerful heart suit after his partner had contented himself with a two-club overcall.

The eventual jump to five hearts was a fine bid, asking for a slam if South could control diamonds, and the invita-tion was duly accepted.

West led the diamond ace and made the normal play of continuing the suit in the hope that his partner could ruff. However, South ruffed, drew trumps and set about clubs. It

"Gerulaitis or Arias bit the ball solid on their ground strokes and you can get into a better groove," Krickstein said. Noah? "He hits lots of chips and spins . . . It was a tough to get into a groove."

Although he always seemed on the verge of being overpowered by Noah's repertoire and solid first serve, Krickstein was in the match until 2-1 in the second-set tie breaker. Krickstein served a second serve and lobbed over Noah, who had come in on the CHICAGO - Rookie Ron Kittle homered in his fifth successive game and LaMarr Hoyt became the major leagues' first 19-game winner here Tuesday night as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Oakland A's, 7-6. Chicago fattened, its lead in the American League West to 14 games.

Kittle's 32d home run of the season came off Chris Codiroli (12-10) during a two-rum third inning. A foot inside the foul pole, the ball landed on the left-field roof, making Kittle the 20th player in the 73year history of Comiskey Park to put a ball onto or over the roof. Teammate Greg Luzinski has done it three times this year, Ted Williams and Jimmy Foxx accomplished the feat twice each.

Asked what took him so long to hit his first roof-topper here, Kittle, who has homered in six of his last seven games, said: "T've been setting the stage - I've been working on it the last week and a half."

Hoyt (19-10) won his eighth straight decision. He allowed eight hits, including a pair of bases-emp-ty home runs to Wayne Gross, before departing in the eighth, Four pitchers finished up, including Dennis Lamp, who recorded his Chicago went ahead to stay with

USOC Emphasizes Welfare of Athletes But Takes Firm Stand on Drug Testing

By Kathy Blumenstock Washington Post Service WASINGTON - The recent

uproar over tougher testing for drug use among athletes has tended to overshadow the medical effects

"Nobody says much about the medical benefits or detriments," said Al Oerter, the Olympic discus-thrower. "Checks should be made on these guys, not only because the stuff is banned but because of potential long-term effects. No one knows what it will do to their bodics 20 years from now." F. Don Miller, executive director of the United States Olympic Com-mittee, insists his organization's main concern is the athlete's health, and that it will begin pretesting U.S. competitors within the next 90 to 120 days.

"Our whole point is this: The banned substances are harmful.

And if you're taking them you're a fraudulent winner," said Miller. At the recent Pan American Games in Caracas, strict testing standards turned up 16 positive results, and 11 U.S. track and field athletes left the games abruptly, before their events began, when ad-vised of the sophisticated methods. Until then, tests for drag use among athletes in the Western Hemisphere had been inadequate at best. But a superior laboratory facility and the expertise of West Germany's Dr. Manfred Donike, who developed the new procedures, changed the situation completely. The testing at the Los Angeles Olympics next year will be even more stringent, according to Tony Daly, U.S. representative on the International Olympic Committee's medical committee. With an accredited laboratory at the Olympics site and testing done in coopcration with UCLA medical experts, Daly said, "15 percent of the athletes at the games will be tested, and they have no way of knowing when or if they'll be called.

"What we want is a drug-free Olympics, and I think there is no athlete who doesn't welcome a chance to clean up and compete on his own merit"

Daly said some athletes are ap-parently confused about the IOCs banned substances list, which is divided into specific categories.

"I've seen reports that athletes say antihistamines are illegal, and that is not true. The effect of antihistamines is to make you a little sleepy," he said, "so they would never be on that list."

Daly, an orthopedic surgeon who serves as medical director for the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, said that few athletes, if any, are aware of the potential long-term damage associated with the use of anabolic steroids, a synthetic derivative of the male hormone testosterone.

"Some studies indicate it helps [in adding muscle bulk], others don't, so there is nothing conclusive," he said. "But I try to point out the harm it can cause; short term, there is abnormal liver function, temporary impotence; long term, those same difficulties plus a possible instance of a tumor. Pyka, a native of Bayonne, New Jersey, and a graduate of the University of Maryland, denied ever taking steroids and said he still believes the testing in Caracas was calculated to put the United States. at a disadvantage because the same high standards were not in effect at the world track and field championships in Helsinki, where more

Enropeans competed. "Statements like that are evading the issue," Miller said. "Some track and field events do not lend themselves to use of many banned sub-stances like steroids."

Miller said the stricter testing is be present at a second screening.

Miller brushes aside the athletes' misunderstandings about the banned-substance list. "Education alone isn't going to do it. Every-body knows what's on it and the drugs are harmful," he said. "It's part of the syndrome in the U.S., to win at any cost."

The new testing methods measure the concentration of targeted elements in an athlete's urine sample, breaking down any drugs pre-sent into their component parts. "The easiest explanation is that every drug has a fingerprint, and that the computer matches the fin-gerprints." Daly said. ment, the shorter the equipment, the shorter the so-called "safe period" for an athlete who might be taking a drug.

Dear Rich But Perplexed, The best time to donate to an incumbent'a political campaign is when there is no legislation pend-ing. In that way the pol can accept the money from a special interest group with a clear conscience, and then support your cause at a later date when you really oeed him

Dear Sir, I represent a small political action committee interested in keeping out Honduran-made tent poles. We can't afford to finance every candidate running for office this year. How do we make an impact with one limited funds? Poor But Proud

Dear PBP, Every PAC organization faces a similar problem. Your best bet is to finance the campaigns of the chairpersons of crucial committees inthe present administration's committee to re-elect the president. Be sure and specify to the treasurer of the political party that the money is being given, not to keep communist tent poles out of Honduras, but Honduran tent poles out of the United States.

Dear Friend. I am running for the presidential oomination and am having a terri-ble time collecting money at this stage of the game. Do you have any The Best Man

Or sponsoring a punk rock concert at the Los Angeles Coliseum for kids who want to grow up in a better world? If you can't raise a lousy $25 million for a primary campaign, how are you going to find the hun-dreds of billions of dollars the country will need in the next four years to balance the budget?

> Dear Sir, I would like to give money to a candidate, but I want to make sure he knows I gave it. When is the best time to make a political cootribu-

> > Good Citizen

Dear G.C., Timing is everything when it comes to giving to a candidate. The consensus seems to be that "late money talks more loudly than early money." That is to say, in a close race when the person running for office gets more desperate at the end, money becomes a lot more important to a candidate than it was at the beginning of his/her campaign. Therefore, if you hold out until the last week and then suddenly hand your man a check. volved with tent poles, leaving he will remember you a lot more enough money aside to donate to fondly than if you stuffed a thouhe will remember you a lot more sand dollars in his pocket months ago when his campaign was in the doldrums.

> Dear Mr. B, I used to give a lot of money to a certain political party and I was invited to many social functions, including the White House. This year I had some severe business setbacks and have been unable to donate anything. I seem to have been dropped from all parties that I used to be invited to. Is there any correlation between a person's social life in Washington and how much he gives to the political party of his choice?

Dee Wallace and Life After 'E.T.'

By Lloyd Grove Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — She con-tended with a creature from space in "E.T." and came to grips with werewolves in "The Howling." Now it seems only natural that Dee Wallace should be up against a killer Saint Bernard.

As the star of "Cujo," Wallace gets mauled repeatedly by the ra-bid canine of the movie's title. It'a a scratch-and-bleed flick depicting three harrowing days during which Wallace and 6-yearold Danny Pintauro are trapped without food or water inside a broken-down Ford Pinto on an isolated farm in Maine. Cujo has already ripped to shreds the auto mechanic, the mechanic's best friend and a sheriff's deputy. And all Dee has is a baseball bat.

The whole thing was enough to drive her clear around the bend. "After we finished filming, they had to treat me for exhaustion for two months," says Wal-lace. Her husband, Christopher Stone, who plays her illicit lover in the movie, sits nearby on the sofa in the hotel room. She's looking fresh and rested and apple-pie pretty, like the Kansas high-school teacher she used to be. She talks about "Cujo" like a mother discussing her firstborn, exploding now and then into a shattering laugh. While "Cujo" has opened to mixed reviews, it's a big atep in the career of the 34-year-old actress, catapulting her — according to a press release — to "the near-top of her profession."

"We were in that car for five weeks, from 5 in the morning till 7 at night," Wallace says. "And we were freezing the whole time. It was raining every day. They sprayed us down with water to make us lonk like we were sweating. We'd do a scene, and they'd throw blankets over us and turn on little portable heaters.

"And it wasn't one dog. It was five," she says with a mad giggle. "One dog was trained to snarl and growl, another to dig, another to go through the windows. Those dogs were treated better than I was, no joke. Every time one of them finished a scene with all its makeup on, it was washed down and blown dry. The dogs were tranquilized, and there were

Christopher Stone, whom she married three years ago after meeting him while filming an episode of "CHiPS," lights up a ciga-rette. He's handsome and familiar-looking in the manner of a journeyman television actor. "Living with her is like living in the middle of a crisis clinic," he says with a bittle grin. Dee, eyes videning, shoots him a glare. "Oh Christopher," she shrieks, what a terrible thing to say." "It's true, but that's oot negative," he says consolingly. "I'm oot saying that in a negative way. It's just that -" "Well how do you think that's going to look in print?"

"Now already there's a crisis here. She's worried about it." "Gosh," she sighs, and Stone takes her by the hands and stares meltingly into her eyes, "Yon're just very emotional," he says. "The last day of filming in the car," be says, "I woke up around 5 in the morning, and Dee was sitting on the edge of the bed with her head in her hands, and she was sobbing. And I said, 'Honey,

"Oh stop," Wallace says, "I'm going to sound so neurotic," but Stone shrugs and goes on. "So Dee said, I just can't go back to that car. I just can't do it today.' I very fine edge." "And you know," Wallace picks up, "I was so connected with the little boy, Danny Pintauro, that when I got to the set, Danny's mother told me that be'd been crying, too, and he didn't want to come back out, either. I can't speak for Chris, but I do believe in reincarnation, and somebody on the set said that if Danny and I had been together in another life, he would have been my father. He's that wise." Dee Wallace's father in this life was a jack-of-all-trades and itinerant salesman - Dell Comics, Butternot Coffee - who died while she was still in high school in Kansas City. Her mother was, is, a working woman and amateur

It was her mother, Dee Wallace says, who insisted that she devote her studies at the University of Kansas to becoming a schoolteacher. Wallace kept at it for a year, then sold everything she I'm talking Bette Davi owned, and went to New York. ing to be a giant star."

She spent two years in New York before beading for the West Coast, and earned her keep doing commercials and bit parts in the odd TV series.

Blake Edwards saw her, liked her and cast her as the sad-sack barfly who lusts for Dudley Moore in the hit movie "10." Then the producer Daniel Blatt, who made "Cujo," cast her as the werewolf-hassled TV anchorwoman in "The Howling." Then Stephen Spielberg put her in "E.T.," the biggest blockbuster in Hollywood history.

In "Cujo," Wallace is getting star treatment, with her name above the title, plus a handsome salary and a small percentage of the profits. "Which means that if the movie makes $100 million, we get $47.50," her husband says. Says Wallace, "Tm not making as much as Meryl Streep or Dustin Hoffman, but I'm making a lot." She says she commands considerably more than the $50,000 she was paid for "The Howling."
She and Stone, who live in Woodland Hills, a rich suburb of Los Angeles, attribute much of their success to Conceptology, a quasi-religion started by a San Antonio chiropractor, Thurman Fleets, which features such concepts as "vegetable phase," "elec-trical phase" and "imaging."

"Basically, it's positive think-ing," says Wallace. "Tve been involved with it since I met Christopher. He's on a much higher level. I'm still scratching my way up. Basically, if you are coming from a positive place of love . . . trails off, looking a bit flustered.

Daniel Ruge said the president began wearing the hearing aid in Santa Barbara on his vacation stay last month. The president suffered a 10 percent hearing loss after a blank was fired near his ear during his days as a movie actor. Interviewed about the hearing aid, Reagan, 72, was asked: "How is your hearing?" What?" he replied with a big smile. The hearing aid was ob-served publicly for the first time when Reagan unveiled a new program to wipe out adult illiteracy in Washington.

A U.S. federal judge has found the Jewish Defense League in contempt of court for failing to testify in a suit brought by actress Vanessa Redgrave, who claims she was a victim of a blacklist campaign be-cause of her political views. Redgrave has been seeking testimony from Jewish groups to support her charge that the Boston Symphony Orchestra broke a contract because of her outspoken support of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Her suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Boston, protested the or-chestra's cancellation of April 1982 performances in which Redgrave was to the narrator in Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex." The Jewish Defense League and other Jewish groups are not named as defendants in the suit. A lawyer for the JDL said the organization had oot been represented at the hearing because there had been a scheduling mix-up and be would ask that the decision be set aside. The judge said he would fine the organization $100 each day it fails to submit testimony.

Luci Johnson, 36, youoger daughter of the late President Lyndon Johnson, confirmed she is engaged to Ian Turpin, a British banker, and will be married late this year or early in 1984.
